

A day in the life: Corporate Tax

Amy Watson, Associate

No two days are the same! I typically work with upwards of 10 clients, which keeps things dynamic and exciting. My core responsibilities include preparing draft tax returns for clients and ensuring compliance with relevant legislation. Once reviewed, these returns are issued for signing and submitted to HMRC.

We also ensure that clients meet their tax deadlines and that all filings are completed on time. A key part of our role is adding value; helping clients optimise their tax position by identifying and utilising any available reliefs. Beyond compliance work, there are opportunities to get involved in broader projects. I've also contributed to broader projects such as drafting client advice, worked on capital allowances, and gained experience in employment tax.

I studied Biology at university, which shows you do not need to have an accountancy background to work at CT. Undergoing my professional qualifications has also given me a solid foundation of accounting and tax principles which I can apply throughout my day-to-day tasks.

Overall, the team is supportive in helping me continue to learn and develop at every level no matter what I may be working on.
